

JAMES E. “TREY” TRAINOR, III

Trey Trainor is an election law attorney from Driftwood, Texas. He has been licensed by the Texas Supreme Court since 2003 and by the District of Columbia since 2010. He currently manages his own private law practice and previously worked as a Partner at Akerman, LLP, and Berine, Maynard, & Parsons, LLP. Mr. Trainor represents corporations, interest groups, political figures, and other entities with respect to election law, campaign finance, and ethics.

Mr. Trainor currently volunteers as the assistant general counsel to the Republican Party of Texas. In 2017 he temporarily served in President Donald Trump’s administration as a Special Assistant to the Secretary of Defense. Trey has represented and counseled numerous political figures and organizations and has been involved in several recounts and election contests at the state and federal level. Previously, he served as the General Counsel to the Texas Secretary of State and was appointed as the statewide Republican member representing Texas on the Standards Advisory Board to the U.S. Elections Assistance Commission. He also spent a decade working in various roles in the Texas Legislature, culminating in his service as Counsel to the Texas House Committee on Regulated Industries.

Trey received his bachelor’s degree from Texas A&M University, where he was a member of the Corps of Cadets, and his J.D. from Texas A&M University School of Law. He has been married to his wife, Lucy, for 17 years, and they have six children, James (15), Abigail (14), Patrick (12), Mary Catherine (11), Charles (8), and Andrew (6). He is a parishioner at Saint Mary Cathedral in Austin, Texas.