

Maya Wiley is the president and CEO of The Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights and The Leadership Conference Education Fund. A nationally respected civil rights attorney, Wiley has been a litigator at the ACLU, NAACP Legal Defense Fund, Inc., and the US Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York. In 2014, she became the first Black woman to be Counsel to a New York City Mayor, Bill de Blasio, where she worked to protect and expand civil rights, Minority and Women-Owned Business contracts and broadband access. Wiley became the Henry Cohen Professor of Public and Urban Policy at the Milano School of Policy, Management and Environment where she founded the Digital Equity Laboratory and also served as the Senior Vice President for Social Justice at the New School University. She has served on the New York City Automated Decisions Systems Task Force and the Atlantic Council Task Force for a Trustworthy Future Web. She has received numerous awards, including being named one of the World's 100 Most Influential Leaders in Digital Government by Apolitical. Wiley has been a public voice for rights, justice, and democracy, through written opinion editorials and as a former legal analyst for NBC News and MSNBC.